Dear Professor,

I am writing to you regarding an issue with my Lab 1 assignment submission. As per the instructions, I was supposed to upload my work to GitHub. However, due to persistent error messages during the upload process, I submitted through Google Drive to meet the deadline, which I informed you about via email.

Recently, while troubleshooting the GitHub upload issues, I discovered a critical error in my submission. After downloading the submission from Google Drive, I realized that only the Lab 1 report was correctly uploaded, and the "app" folder was empty. This oversight meant that a significant portion of my work was missing from the submission.

I have been diligently trying to identify the root cause of this problem. During Nsanzimfura D'Amour's office hours earlier today, we uncovered that the empty "app" folder was causing Git to ignore it, explaining why it wasn't included in my submission. This error likely occurred when I was hastily trying to upload to GitHub before the deadline. In my haste, I must have inadvertently copied the wrong files, resulting in the incomplete submission.

As of now, I haven't been contacted by the TA assigned to grade my work, which leads me to believe they may not have reviewed my submission yet. I wanted to bring this to your attention proactively and seek your advice on the best course of action.

I understand the importance of timely and complete submissions, and I take full responsibility for this oversight. I am committed to rectifying this situation and ensuring that my work is properly represented. I have also attached my report as evidence of assignment completion.

Would it be possible to resubmit the complete assignment, including the correctly populated "app" folder?

I appreciate your understanding, and I look forward to your response.
Sincerely,
Oluwole

Sure ... best if you can upload finally to GitHub otherwise just update your original site. Put a copy of this note alongside so the TAs see the history.

Have you resolved the GitHub issues ?
